

IMO MOCK SESSION 2023

PAPER SUBMISSION DETAILS

The Participants will additionally have guidance from Industry stalwarts (besides their own campus coordinators) who will act as Guides and be assigned to them. The Papers are to be prepared in the format similar to IMO (downloadable from the IMO website as a public user) and submitted as per schedule announced separately as “IMU IMO Mock Session 2023 schedule “and available on the IMU website.

After the last date of Paper submission 1,

Papers submitted by the Teams playing different roles will be shared, enabling participants playing a particular Role to understand the positions taken by the Teams playing other Roles, but not allowing them to see the Papers of teams playing the same role as their own. (For Example; the stream is having 30 participating teams for their topic, thus there will be six teams per Role category. Now Teams of Role Category A would get to see all papers of category B, C,D & E, but not the papers of category A. The rationale behind such disclosure is to make the participants understand the viewpoints of the other categories of the same topic. A noteworthy part of the competition is that the papers of participants of the same category of same topic will not be subjected to the disclosure within themselves).

2. After understanding the viewpoints of teams with different roles of the same Topic, each team can insert modifications, if any, to the contents of their Paper submission 1 (already submitted) and can submit a modified paper highlighting the changes as their Final Paper, (length of Final paper should not exceed by 2 pages from original paper submission 1), within the time prescribed in the schedule.
